GREETINGS FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear Friends,

As we welcome HBU's 51st freshman class this fall, we are experiencing a strong sense of momentum across many areas of the campus. Thanks to the planning, prayers and hard work of countless individuals, this momentum has been building for several years—whether in athletics, student life, campus development projects, or the academic program. Since 2008, we have been taking important steps in our efforts to implement the goals in our Ten Pillars vision; now, however, we are making major strides toward their fulfillment.

Of course the whole campus has been energized by HBU's historic first football game against Sam Houston State on Aug. 31. Coach Vic Shealy and his staff worked hard to prepare our football athletes for their seven-game developmental season. And we are thrilled that, thanks to the generosity of Archie and Linda Dunham, the Huskies now practice on Dunham Field. We are also excited about the new Chick-fil-A that just opened in our M.D. Anderson Student Center—to the delight of students, faculty, staff and campus visitors.

In addition to these enhancements, we continue to gain momentum in planning the development of our US 59 and Fondren retail zone. In the pages that follow, you will find exciting articles and artistic renderings that showcase not only Belin Drive and the proposed development of our retail zone, but also our plans for developing our academic, residential and athletic zones as part of a master plan designed to transform the campus and revitalize our community.

Finally, we are experiencing strong momentum as we expand the University's academic programs and build a stellar faculty of acclaimed Christian scholars. Provost John Mark Reynolds, Dr. Michael Ward, Dr. Jerry Walls, and the top three female Christian apologists in America—Nancy Pearcey, Mary Jo Sharp, and Dr. Holly Ordway—are only some of the faculty contributing to HBU's growing national prominence as an institution that promotes a Christian worldview. And, of course, we are thrilled that pre-eminent Christian apologist Lee Strobel, author of The Case for Christ, has joined the faculty in our School of Christian Thought. We all look forward to the contributions he will make on the campus and in our community.

I know you will enjoy reading about football, the new Chick-fil-A, our campus master plan, our apologetics faculty, and other exciting topics in this issue of HBU News. These are all evidence of the growing momentum we are experiencing at HBU as we work to provide "A Higher Education," one that points to the lordship of Jesus Christ.

Blessings,

Robert B. Sloan Jr.

51st freshman class starts strong

A RECORD-BREAKING YEAR?

EXCITEMENT IS IN THE AIR—not only because the newest huskies are brimming with enthusiasm for everything happening at HBU, but also because we are entering the second half of our first century with what may be a record-breaking freshman class.

Because students have two weeks after class begins to decide whether they will keep or drop courses, the official freshman count was not available at press time. Nevertheless, Vice President of Enrollment Management James Steen was cautiously optimistic. "Whether we break the freshman class record of 560 is yet to be seen," said James, "but I am confident that we will land at or above the budgeted numbers."

In June, the Board of Trustees approved a growth-oriented budget based on anticipated enrollment that could drive a number of exciting projects. The latest data suggests the University budget stands on solid ground.

PATRICK MOORE TO BUILD MARCHING BAND

Patrick Moore has been added to the HBU music faculty as Director of Bands. His responsibilities will include forming a marching band which will perform at all home football games and an HBU band which will play at all home basketball games. He is an active percussion performer, educator, arranger, adjudicator and clinician.

DR. SLOAN HOSTS RADIO PROGRAM

As of July 1st, Dr. Robert B. Sloan Jr. is hosting a brand new radio program. A Higher Education will air weekdays at 3 p.m. on KKHT 100.7, The Word, in Houston. This new program features conversations between Dr. Sloan and a variety of influential and engaging guests as well as his best sermons.

TRADITIONAL HBU RING RETURNS

May graduates celebrated their transition to alumni with an inaugural class ring ceremony. Seniors graduating in December will renew a lost HBU tradition with the return of the official HBU class ring for all graduates. The traditional ring was worn by every class until the 1990s.

STUDENT ATHLETES GIVE TO COMMUNITY

The HBU Student-Athlete Advisory Committee and the Greater Houston Special Olympics joined together to provide several Special Olympics athletes an opportunity to experience a day in the life of an NCAA Division I student-athlete. A vast majority of Special Olympics athletes are unable to attend a university or college.

Rock the Bradshaw

CAMPUS REC IS NOT JUST FOR JOCKS

A NEWLY INSTALLED ROCK-CLIMBING WALL is proving to be a "lightening rod for activity" at HBU's Bradshaw Fitness Center, according to Campus Recreation Director Josh Dunn. Even people who aren't quite ready to strap in and climb the 28-foot-high wall stop to ask questions about it, he said.

The climbing wall is just one of many options offered by Campus Recreation to enhance campus life and encourage students to develop healthy lifestyle habits. Dunn aims to offer recreational activities that appeal to as many students as possible, even those who might not be inclined to use the fitness center's state-of-the-art workout equipment, or play one of the numerous intramural or club-level team sports available to students.

That's why Dunn designed the Epic Adventures program to attract students who may not consider themselves athletes. For example, the new academic year kicked off with HBU's version of the popular Hunger Games book and movie series. Just before classes started, 24 incoming freshman and upper classmen enjoyed a two-day outing filled with hiking, canoeing, camping, paintball and volleyball. In keeping with the themes of the Hunger Games storyline, they also competed for prizes. Devotional times helped set the tone for the spiritual focus that is an integral part of the HBU student experience. The outing is a lot of fun, said Dunn, but the greater purpose is to give incoming freshman a chance to begin forming HBU memories and friendships even before classes begin.

Other activities planned under the Epic Adventure umbrella include the 5K Husky Hustle run, the Dragon Boat Regatta, black-light dodge ball, and a bike tour through a local farmers' market. "We're reaching out to as many students as possible to create a culture of health and wellness," said Dunn.

DOUG TENNAPEL: creator of Earthworm Jim, The Neverhood and Cardboard

Top talent launches Cinema & New Media

EMBRACING THE STORYTELLERS

According to University President Robert B. Sloan Jr., the newly developed Cinema & New Media Arts program aims to provide an opportunity for students to engage with both emerging technologies and the timeless art of storytelling. "Writers and filmmakers make up a powerful force in today's culture," says Sloan. Provost John Mark Reynolds echoes this sentiment and adds, "It's awfully sad that the movie version of the greatest novel of the twentieth-century written by a traditional Christian—Tolkien's Lord of the Rings—had to be produced by pagans because Christians lacked the skills. HBU will rectify that situation within a decade."

In pursuit of that goal, NOTED ANIMATOR, GAME DESIGNER, AND GRAPHIC NOVELIST DOUG TENNAPEL is the newest addition to HBU's Cinema & New Media Arts program, which is offering its first classes this fall. For nearly twenty years, TenNapel has been a creative force in popular media, beginning with his video game concept Earthworm Jim, which spawned an animated TV series and toy line in the 1990s. Today, TenNapel is developing film and television projects for DreamWorks, Nickelodeon, and Netflix, while also creating new video games and graphic novels.

At HBU, TenNapel is collaborating with program director Joshua Sikora to build a major that takes advantage of the developing opportunities available to media creators in the twenty-first century. "The media landscape is rapidly evolving and the doors are wider than ever for young people with a passion for filmmaking, video game design, and new media on the web," explains Sikora.

Last year, HBU recruited SIKORA, A NEW MEDIA ENTREPRENEUR FROM SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, to design the new major. "Five or ten years ago, it would've been impossible for a small university in Houston to do this," Sikora explains. "But today, films can be produced anywhere, video games are being designed by two or three person teams, and websites like Facebook and YouTube are redefining the very idea of broadcasting—HBU wants to be part of this media revolution."

Key to Sikora's strategy is connecting HBU's students directly with top talent. With a two-decade career spanning multiple mediums, Doug TenNapel fit the bill perfectly. "To succeed in media today, artists need to be able to adapt quickly and deftly cross from one multimedia platform to another—exactly what Doug has done so well for more than twenty years," explains Sikora.

Beginning in 2014, TenNapel will be teaching Cinema & New Media Arts courses online and in person, as well as giving students the opportunity to apprentice directly with him on his professional projects. He will also be available to review student work and provide feedback on their productions.

This kind of one-on-one mentorship is at the center of HBU's efforts to become the leading Christian university for aspiring artists. Cinema is simply the latest focus in the University's dynamic and diverse School of Fine Arts, joining music, studio art and creative writing.

The new program will operate in conjunction with HBU's Journalism & Mass Communication major, led by DR. JEFF WILKINSON, AN EXPERT IN CONVERGENT MEDIA AND MULTI-PLATFORM JOURNALISM. Dr. Wilkinson has cultivated relationships with Houston-area businesses and media production companies, offering HBU students numerous first-class internship opportunities.

HE IS A PHILOSOPHY MAJOR WHO GRADUATED IN MAY AND IS OFF TO PRINCETON THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY. SHE IS A HOUSTON TEXANS CHEERLEADER AND FORMER MISS TEXAS TEEN USA WHO JUST STARTED HER SOPHOMORE YEAR. HERE ARE THEIR STORIES.

Recent graduate JEREMY KLUTTS is proud to have called HBU home, but hopes to make his fellow Huskies proud as our latest representative to the Ivy League. Having been accepted to the University of Chicago, Duke, Fordham and Princeton, Jeremy decided to pursue a master of divinity at Princeton Theological Seminary.

He gives credit to his philosophy professors Jeremy Neill and Jeff Green for making the suggestion. "All of the members of the department became mentors to me," said Jeremy. "I can't begin to describe the impact they had on me and how grateful I am for all of their individual interest in me."

Jeremy was a model student during his four years at HBU, excelling in academics, but also heavily involved in student life as a member of the Beta Upsilon Chi fraternity and president of the Student Government Association. When asked what advice he has for student leaders, he offered the following: "One, never think of yourself as better than those in your organization—your successes ride on the shoulders of others; two, realize your own limitations and the strengths of others; and three, never back down from an idea, a dream or a problem."

"YOU WILL FIND NO BETTER COMMUNITY OF MEN AND WOMEN, WHO ARE ALL AT ONCE SERIOUS ABOUT ACADEMICS AND SERIOUS ABOUT THEIR MISSIONAL CALLING"

part of what is happening there," he remarks. "Ultimately, I would really like to return to the Houston area and hopefully even HBU. Some of the most important people in my educational career and my life as a whole are HBU professors. I want to be able to give back what I was given."

After seminary, Jeremy plans to pursue a PhD in philosophy and follow in the footsteps of the professors who inspired him. For Jeremy, philosophy will always be an essential discipline, as it "reminds us what it means to be human, to be the imago Dei." Philosophy compels us to ask "the fundamental questions of our own existence." What is evil and how do we respond to it? Are we more than just reasoning beasts? Questions like these help us confront a variety of life situations in ways no textbook can.

Interacting with professors and students who take those questions seriously is precisely what Jeremy values about his HBU experience. "I am convinced that you will find no better community of men and women, who are all at once serious about academics, but at the same time earnest about their missional calling for the gospel," said Jeremy.

As he moves on to Princeton with a scholarship package covering 80 percent of his tuition, Jeremy has no intention of leaving HBU in the dust. "I am proud to have been a

It never occurred to HBU sophomore MADISON LEE that she might want to be a Houston Texans cheerleader. At least not until her brother Matthew handed her a flyer advertising tryouts. Though Madison was captain of her Northland Christian School cheer squad in high school, she wasn't sure she wanted to cheer for the Texans. But Madison's mother, Tammy Lee, reasoned that her daughter loves the Texans, loves dancing, and would get to make friends with a lot of Madison acknowledges that some people don't understand how reigning as a beauty queen or cheering for an NFL team could honor God, but for her the connection is clear. Her high-profile activities give her opportunities to meet many people she wouldn't otherwise, and Madison says she is never hesitant to share her faith with whoever will listen. She noted that the Bible teaches that we are to use our talents for God's glory, and added, "That is just what I'm doing—using the talents God has given me, bringing it all back to him, and giving him the glory."

"BEING A HOUSTON TEXANS CHEERLEADER OR BEING MISS TEXAS TEEN USA DOES NOT DEFINE WHO I AM. GOD GETS THE CREDIT FOR MY SUCCESSES."

other girls her age. And Matthew insisted, "You gotta do it!"

Madison began to ponder, pray, and research. After observing that the Texan cheer squad costumes were relatively modest and their dancing style was more sassy than provocative, she agreed to attend a pre-trial workshop. "Once I met some of the girls, and got back into dancing, I got the bug," she said. As is her habit, Madison prayed that God would lead her and only open the door if joining the squad was his will. On tryout day, more than a thousand girls auditioned at the Methodist Training Center. Madison was among the thirty-four who made the squad.

As winner of Miss Texas Teen USA 2012, Madison is quite accustomed to all the attention public roles tend to draw. Nonetheless, she manages to stay grounded in her faith by being intentional about keeping her relationship with Christ her first priority. Madison's favorite Bible verse is 1 Corinthians 9:24-27, because, as she explained, "It keeps me motivated to give 110% in everything that I do, whether it is cheering, school, competing in a pageant, or working on strengthening my relationship with God. It also reminds me that every crown, trophy, or plaque that I receive here on earth is temporary, but I try to be my best for 'the crown that will last forever.'"

When asked how she feels about going onstage in a swimsuit, and the midriff-baring tops and hot pants cheerleaders must wear, Madison replied that she is comfortable: "For me, working out and maintaining my body is very spiritual. It's God's temple where he lives, and taking great care of it is one way of showing my dedication to him."

Madison has long been active in community service, and racked up more than 300 volunteer hours in high school, many of them serving meals and providing worship services for the homeless with Street Reach Ministries. But cheering for the Texans has given her a platform to serve and bless in ways she otherwise couldn't. She was able to go with a few of the football players and cheerleaders as they visited Fire Stations 51 and 68 to honor the firefighters who died in a five-alarm blaze in Southwest Houston on May 31. The team presented each station with jerseys embroidered with the firehouse numbers and the names of the fallen firefighters.

Cheering for the Texans is only a part-time job; the twenty-year-old nursing student is taking 13-credit hours this fall. Now that her freshman year is completed, Madison is glad she chose HBU. "The professors are absolutely incredible. They really want you to succeed," she explained.

After she completes her training, Madison hopes to work as a pediatric oncology nurse, having been inspired by her eight-year-old friend Julia Cobb. Julia suffers from a rare form of cancer known as Ewing's sarcoma. Madison met Julia and her family when they attended a pageant. Though Madison and the other pageant contestants are ostensibly role models for young girls like Julia, Madison is emphatic that Julia is a role model for her. "That girl changed my life. She influences and inspires me every day. And I never would have met her if I weren't involved in pageants. It is so obvious to me that God does have a plan." (H)

Recruiting for National Influence

NO APOLOGIES

WITH THE ADDITION OF THREE LEADING APOLOGETISTS to its already stellar faculty, HBU's School of Christian Thought is poised to become the leading center for preparing students to communicate the truth and beauty of the Christian faith to present and future generations. Provost John Mark Reynolds allows that a handful of schools do a great job of teaching traditionally defensive apologetics—showing that the Bible is reliable, and giving historical evidence for Christ's resurrection, for instance—but HBU's program has an additional cultural apologetics component that sets it apart.

"Cultural apologetics" is the term coined to describe the pioneering work of the late Francis Schaeffer, one of the two leading apologists of the twentieth century. HBU is thrilled to have NANCY PEARCEY on board as a professor and scholar-in-residence, because she is intimately familiar with his work, having studied with Schaeffer and authored several books that apply his approach to science, art, and other elements of culture. Heralded as "America's pre-eminent evangelical Protestant female intellectual" by The Economist magazine, Pearcey won two ECPA Gold Medallion Awards for her books Total

Truth and How Now Shall We Live? (the latter co-authored with Chuck Colson and novelist Harold Fickett). She and her writer-editor husband J. Richard Pearcey will also direct the Francis Schaeffer Center for Worldview and Culture at HBU.

Pearcey explains that Schaeffer's unique contribution is to help Christians see where the culture is headed by understanding how each prevailing ideology influences and leads to the next ideology over the course of intellectual history. Understanding why romanticism and eventually postmodernism followed the era of materialism, for example, allows us to see how the logical implications of a particular worldview play out in ideas, behaviors, and cultural norms. "Learning to think in terms of worldview allows us to get ahead of the curve culturally speaking, instead of being shocked at each new stage of secularization and always reacting," contends Pearcey.

Another thing that made Francis Schaeffer different, says Pearcey, is that he showed how movies, songs, books, and even advertisements reflect a particular worldview; learning to recognize anti-Christian worldviews empowers believers to both resist secularization and to engage others in natural conversations about competing ideologies. Though there is much to be gleaned from his life and body of work, Pearcey emphasizes that, "Our goal is to go beyond a study of Francis Schaeffer. Worldview is about being a missionary for your day. We want to help students learn how to do apologetics themselves so they can apply worldview thinking to the challenges of our time."

HBU HAS ALSO ADDED TO ITS FACULTY the world's foremost expert on imaginative apologetics and C. S. Lewis, the other leading Christian apologist of our century. DR. MICHAEL WARD lectures internationally on Lewis, Tolkien and apologetics, and is the author of the groundbreaking study of Lewis' writings, Planet Narnia: The Seven Heavens in the Imagination of C.S. Lewis.

Ward will teach online courses, visit the Houston campus each spring for in-person work with students, and serve as director of the University's new C.S. Lewis Centre in Oxford, England. The Centre will promote the study of Lewis and expand the global reach of HBU's apologetics program by allowing Master of Arts in Apologetics (MAA) students to study abroad and work with Ward in Oxford.

Ward is also gifted in bringing scholarly insights to a broader audience. He presented the BBC television documentary The Narnia Code, a popular and accessible introduction to the ideas expressed academically in his book Planet Narnia. He aims to help MAA students likewise work with their own talents, play to their strengths, and develop their own brand of imaginative apologetics, whether they work in the area of fiction or non-fiction. While the role imagination plays in fiction is more obvious, Ward explains that creativity and imagination are also important in non-fiction because "how you express facts can be very much better—or worse—depending on how you exercise your imagination."

WARD WILL TEACH ONLINE COURSES, VISIT THE HOUSTON CAMPUS EACH SPRING... AND SERVE AS DIRECTOR OF THE UNIVERSITY'S NEW C.S. LEWIS CENTRE IN OXFORD, ENGLAND

The intellectual aspects of apologetics are endlessly stimulating for some, but the ultimate purpose of the discipline is, of course, to bring people to faith in Christ. To that end, HBU has recruited atheist-turned-Christian LEE STROBEL, the former award-winning legal editor of The Chicago Tribune and New York Times best-selling author. He won Gold Medallions for his books The Case for Christ, The Case for Faith, and The Case for a Creator, all of which have been made into documentaries distributed by Lionsgate.

Nancy Pearcey is interviewed on campus by Focus On the Family

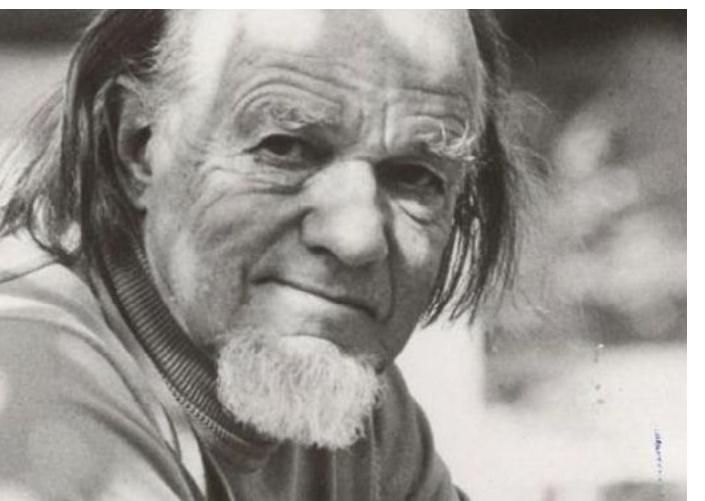

Strobel describes his niche in HBU's School of Christian Thought as bridging the intellectual aspects of apologetics with the practical aspects of evangelism. "At most Christian schools, students put off the course in evangelism because they are afraid they will have to memorize a formula and act like someone they are not," acknowledged Strobel. Instead, he said, each believer should learn to develop their own style in sync with their unique personality and temperament.

As co-author of the highly effective Becoming a Contagious Christian course, Strobel is well-equipped to teach students how to naturally and effectively talk with others about Jesus. Beginning next spring, Strobel will offer a course that he believes people will be excited to take. Specifically, he will show students how to start spiritually fruitful conversations, how to tell their testimony in compelling ways, how to become better listeners, and how to understand the mindset of a skeptical, postmodern generation.

Strobel said he is passionate about teaching evangelism courses because he wants more Christians to experience the joy and excitement of seeing family, friends, neighbors and colleagues come alive in Christ. "Watching God transform lives reminds us that the gospel is powerful and that God is still at work today," he added.

HBU hosts the "[un] Apologetic" conference in the Spring of 2013, featuring lectures by Provost John Mark Reynolds, Lee Strobel and other prominent apologists.

Francis Schaeffer (1912-1984) led a movement in "cultural apologetics" that continues to change lives all over the world.

THE RECRUITMENT OF THESE THREE FACULTY is only the most recent effort to make HBU's School of Christian Thought the strongest program possible, and Provost John Mark Reynolds asserts that such an outstanding center for cultural apologetics couldn't exist anywhere but HBU. When asked to explain, he notes that HBU has the distinct advantage of being in Houston, a large city that has all the resources necessary to be a cultural powerhouse: it's a port city with a strategic airport hub, and is also a center for energy, technology, and medicine. For those reasons and more, he said, Houston regularly makes the top three in lists of important cities. Secondly, he reasoned, HBU may be the only school that is theologically conservative enough to want to become a center of cultural apologetics while also being doctrinally broad enough (in a "mere" Christian sense) to be able to hire the people needed to get the job done. "There are a lot of coalition schools that will read C.S. Lewis," said Reynolds wryly, "but they couldn't hire him if he came on the market because his denominational affiliation [as an Anglican] isn't right." HBU isn't hampered by such limitations, and is able to hire the best Christian faculty available.

The addition of Pearcey, Ward and Strobel is bringing fresh attention to HBU, the department and the exceptional apologetics faculty already here; namely Jerry Walls, Mary Jo Sharp, and department chair Holly Ordway. Observers are already taking note: TheBestSchools.org recently ranked HBU fourth on a list of "The 15 Best Colleges for Studying the Bible," citing our faculty of acclaimed Christian scholars and our new graduate programs in philosophy and apologetics. Powerhouse lifts Nursing & Allied Health

WHEN SHE'S NOT RUNNING EXTREME OBSTACLE COURSES OR LIFTING WEIGHTS, RENAE SCHUMANN IS PREPARING THE SCHOOL FOR NEW HEIGHTS OF SUCCESS

AFTER A YEARLONG SEARCH, the School of Nursing and Allied Health welcomed a new dean, Dr. Renae Schumann, in June to oversee plans for growth and continuing attainment of the highest national standards. Dr. Schumann most recently taught in the School of Nursing at the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston, where she twice received the John P. McGovern Outstanding Teacher of the Year Award.

The new dean noted that the School of Nursing is highly respected regionally, and that Houston hospitals prefer HBU graduates. But she believes the time has come for wider recognition of the outstanding healthcare training offered here. "We're good enough to be ranked with the world's top nursing schools," declared Dr. Schumann.

While Dr. Schumann's professional experience is in nursing, she is eager to promote both the nursing and kinesiology sides of the school. Her enthusiasm for the wellness management and athletic training specializations of the kinesiology program springs from personal experience. In 2006, Schumann weighed over 200 pounds. She believes she was well on her way to a heart attack when God impressed upon her that she is created in his image and should have more respect for her body—his temple. Today she can deadlift 225 pounds, run the Warrior Dash obstacle course, and climb a 15-foot rope in eight seconds.

Dr. Schumann describes her fitness transformation as more than external, in large part because a Christian trainer helped her focus on the spiritual aspect of health and wellness that still motivates her today. She is excited to be at HBU because "Our students can be trained to do the same thing—to help people understand how caring for their bodies glorifies God."

One thing that few people know about the new dean is that she has an alter ego—Velvet the clown. Dr. Schumann went to clown school in 1997 after her doctoral advisor insisted she find some activity that would keep her from taking herself too seriously as she completed her dissertation. Velvet became a frequent guest at local church health fairs and blood drives for four years. She would sit with reluctant blood donors, telling them how much Jesus loves them, and how he loved that they would sacrifice in order to save someone else's life. And by the way, she would ask, did they know that Jesus also made a sacrifice for them?

Though she hasn't put on the white-face or donned the yellow wig and costume with the big yellow flower on the neckline for some time now, Dr. Schumann said that Velvet remains with her. "My clown character loves God. She supports people and shares Jesus with them," she explained. And Velvet is always available to lend Dr. Schumann the confidence needed to take on whatever challenges come her way.

GIFT FROM THE DUNN FOUNDATION

The John S. Dunn Foundation made a generous $200,000 grant to the School of Nursing and Allied Health to fund faculty development and hiring that will allow the school to grow and serve an increasing number of students. Receipt of the grant was contingent on HBU raising matching funds, a challenge successfully met by nursing alumni, previous donors, and the sponsors and attendees of the Spirit of Excellence Gala, held last year.

HBU HOSTS GLOBAL NURSING CONFERENCE

The School of Nursing and Allied Health joined forces with Memorial Hermann and the University of Chester (UK) in May to host their fourth annual global nursing conference, "Advancing the Practice of Nursing: A Global Perspective," on the HBU campus.

The conference opened with Captain Mark Kelly, commander of the space shuttle Endeavour's final mission, and husband to Gabrielle Giffords—the former U.S. Rep. who was shot in the head by a deranged gunman at a public appearance in Jan. 2011. Kelly spoke about the power of the human spirit and how the excellent nursing care his wife received was a critical component of her remarkable recovery.

Other keynote speakers included Tracy Gray, a 1999 graduate of HBU's MBA program and a process and quality consultant with Haliburton, and Irini Antoniadou, president of the International Federation of Perioperative Nurses.

THE MASTER PLAN

BY WESLEY GANT

“So, can you do it without money?”

This isn't typically a question one wants to hear when launching a major development project. But what many would see as a roadblock, Robert "Corky" Dragoo saw as an opportunity. Dragoo, the native Texan engineer who earned accolades for his overhaul of the Texas Tech campus, was approached by President Robert B. Sloan Jr. in Aug. of 2011 with an enticing challenge: Thirty underdeveloped and underutilized acres at the corner of Fondren and US 59 stand ready for an extreme makeover.

The property, viewed by 275,000 commuters each day, remains under HBU ownership, and has generated substantial revenue over the years. But with an eye toward growth, the president and Board of Trustees see this aging property as an opportunity to expand the campus and beautify a highly visible front door to the University. As with all achievements that are truly worthwhile, it is not an easy one, but certainly one that will have far-reaching impact. "We are thrilled to share what we know will be a tremendous leap forward for both our campus and the community," said Sloan.

The resulting plan includes the most dramatic redevelopment project the Sharpstown area has seen in decades, and even the City of Houston is taking note. "Part of our strategic plan is to uncover win-win solutions between the University, private businesses and the City," says Dragoo, "taking some of the pressure off of our own donor base to get this done quickly." Recognizing the many benefits redevelopment is expected to provide the community, including the roughly 200 jobs it is expected to create, the City of Houston will reimburse the University $4.4 million for the project.

The initiative has also drawn the attention of key developers and commercial partners, who will help make the redevelopment financially feasible. Rather than building out amenities that would exclusively serve the campus community, the plan calls for a mixed-use development of retail shops, restaurants, and a hotel and convention center that will serve as a hub of activity for thousands of patrons, such as the 4,200 employees of Memorial Hermann hospital. A new basketball arena will anchor the space, providing the only entertainment venue in Houston that can cater to audiences of 3,000 to 5,000. This distinction will enable the University to lease the facility for a variety of concerts, conventions and other public events.

Aerial view of Fondren, US 59

PGAL, the architectural and development firm hired by HBU, has been working to attract first-rate vendors that will enhance the student experience and the campus work environment. Several current tenants will remain, such as LifeWay Christian Stores and the FedEx Office. Discussions with corporate representatives of Burger King and Shell have led both to develop plans for remodeling and updating their current locations. Shell, which now owns its property, is interested in expanding what they say is the most profitable location in the area.

A number of new companies are eager to move into the 180,000 square feet of space that will soon be a reality. Recently confirmed tenants include Café Express, Starbucks and Chick-Fil-A (the "express" location will remain in the MDA Student Center). "We can attract high quality tenants because we are developing a high quality space," says Dragoo, "and both of these facts equate to a much higher revenue stream. The chicken and the egg have to happen at the same time, but what brings them both about is the vision to make it happen."

A central element of the plan provides a long-awaited entryway to campus from the US 59 feeder. Since its founding, the marquee displaying the University's name has lacked a direct route into the campus, despite a partial road—termed the "road to nowhere" by some—added in 1998. Concrete is expected to be poured in the upcoming year that will finally provide easy access to the University from the freeway. Those who pull onto that road will be greeted by the new Belin Plaza roundabout, featuring a five-story structure dedicated to the memory of the late HBU co-founder and supporter Bruce Belin.

REDEVELOPMENT OF THE PROPERTY ALONG US 59 is just the beginning of a Master Plan that will help make HBU a world-class campus. "Once we began putting the pieces together and looking at the University's needs over the next 10 to 20 years," said Dragoo, "it was clear that we had to start thinking about the project on a much more macro-scale. We had to answer questions like, 'does an arena make sense here if we have a stadium on the opposite side of campus?' or 'how will drainage issues affect future possibilities for an academic building in a given spot? Pretty soon, one question leads to another and you realize the need for a long-term strategy."

Not to be misleading, much of the Master Plan as it currently stands is a hypothetical vision, intended to be fleshed out in detail as the University expands. "We're land-locked," adds Dragoo. "Studies tell us we can grow to 10,000 students, but in order to do that we've got to prepare and think ahead, because every building, parking lot and pond is an interlocking piece. For one, we know we've got to build upward; every new building will be at least four stories tall. Secondly, we have to move in phases. The choreography has to be just right so we don't end up tripping over our own steps. It adds up to a lot of late nights looking over blueprints, but we feel great about the end result."

Master Planner

Corky Dragoo

WHEN PRESIDENT ROBERT SLOAN NEEDED SOMEONE TO PLAN and execute a major renovation of the HBU campus, he knew just the man for the job. Robert E. "Corky" Dragoo is a longtime friend and was a member of Dr. Sloan's congregation when he was interim pastor of Tallowood Baptist Church. Dragoo had already completed a similar overhaul of the Texas Tech University campus. He also had the technical expertise of a professional engineer and the business acumen of a seasoned executive, both of which would be needed for this undertaking.

As Dragoo describes it, Dr. Sloan "knew how to lay bait" to lure him to the role. The former Senior VP for Temple Inland Corporation is known for his expertise in maximizing organizational asset performance. He's even written a book titled Real-Time Profit Management that is used in numerous MBA programs. When Dr. Sloan explained that the University has a tremendous asset of 30 prime acres that aren't yet being used to their best effect, Dragoo was hooked.

Fast forward to the present day, not quite two years after that coffee meeting with Dr. Sloan, and it is clear that Corky Dragoo is indeed a master planner. His office walls and desk are covered with artistic renderings and plans that account for everything from parking needs to technology upgrades to building ornamentation and brick color—and sophisticated computer modeling developed by architectural firm PGAL shows it all in amazing detail. "I can fly you over and around and through the buildings if you like," offers Dragoo.

The Master Plan provides a strategy for accommodating growth, but also for enriching the aesthetic appeal of the campus. It suggests raising and lowering portions of ground to break up the natural flatness of Houston's topography. Winding paths and dramatic courtyards promise scenic vistas, and porticos and breezeways invite students to congregate between classes. Water features and sculpture installations will gradually ornament the landscape.

WHILE MANY ASPECTS OF THE MASTER PLAN will be fine-tuned in the years to come, major components will be a reality before current sophomores graduate. Indeed, the HBU football team is already practicing on the new state-of-the-art Dunham Field, named for longtime supporters Archie and Linda Dunham, who contributed substantially to the project. The field will be expanded to a full stadium as the size of the student body allows. Belin Plaza has already been made possible by a generous gift from Mary Ann Belin, and will be under construction in the coming months. A complete renovation of Holcombe Mall, featuring small, outdoor teaching amphitheaters, is ready to launch with as little as $1 million.

Among the first major additions to the campus in just a few short years will be a new science building and a student services building, both just beyond the Belin Plaza roundabout. In between these two multi-level buildings will be an open corridor leading straight to Holcombe Mall, enabling a direct line of sight from the freeway entrance to the Hinton Center and its ten iconic columns.

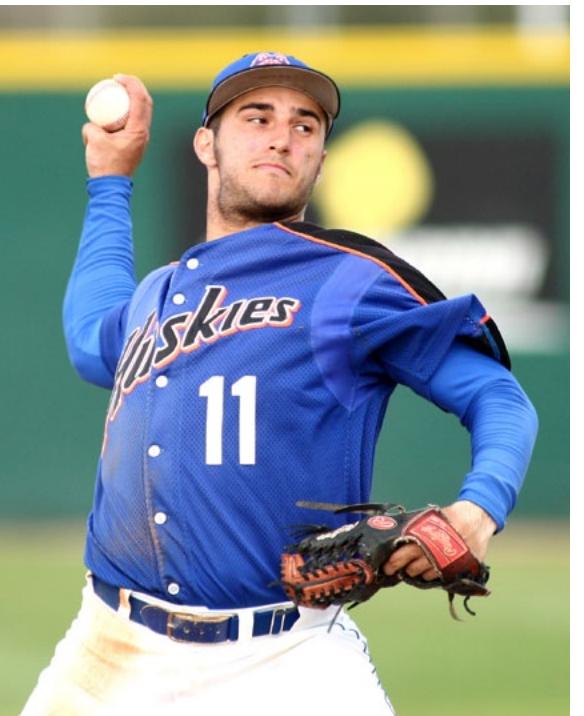

"For years the University has been hidden from public view," says president Sloan. "It's been said that HBU is Houston's best kept secret. But I think we have a story worth telling, and this plan will help us do that." From football and faculty to radio advertising, HBU has been raising its profile among news media and the general public. Through the implementation of the new Master Plan, the University will raise its profile in a much more literal sense, both for those on campus, and for the 275,000 vehicles that pass by daily.

"A GAME PLAN FOR ACCOMMODATING GROWTH, BUT ALSO FOR ENRICHING THE AESTHETIC APPEAL OF THE CAMPUS."

Gillian Gonzalez, HBU junior, earned the bronze medal in the juniors division at the 2013 U.S. Collegiate Figure Skating Championships in August. The competition has been held since 1985 and is the only individual competition open to full-time college students. "I hope to be able to represent HBU in next year's competition, set an even higher standard, and show my love for the sport," said Gonzalez.

Women's basketball player Devyn Weymouth was one of only five student-athletes in the entire conference to achieve a perfect 4.0 GPA.

Baseball's Jake Gonzalez was the only Husky to earn a spot on the Academic All-Conference Team every year he was eligible. Baseball's Garrett Tully, and women's track runners Kenisa Haynes, Jamie Whitt and Jessica Whitt were placed on the team for the second time. There were 13 first-time honorees.

KPRC interviews Coach Kelley and Mary Lou Retton

Former University of Texas football letterman Shannon Kelley and his gold medal-winning Olympic gymnast wife Mary Lou Retton have returned to Houston to help HBU launch its new football program this fall. In May, they sat down with Kelley's former Memorial High School classmate, KPRC anchor Dominique Sachse, on the HBU campus to discuss Retton's gymnastics career and Kelley's love of football for an interview that aired May 19.

FIRST EVER

HBU vs SHSU

Over 650 Huskies poured into Huntsville's Bower Stadium for HBU's historic first football game against Sam Houston State on August 31. Prior to the game, HBU fans from all walks of the University's 53-year history celebrated and tailgated to support the new team and catch up with old friends.

Though the Huskies took a heavy loss (74-0) from the nation's #4 ranked team, the game proved to be a great opportunity to learn and improve. "This was good for our program," said Head Football Coach Vic Shealy, "in the sense that we will narrow the gap between us and the rest of the conference a year from now, having played this game."

Christa Hall, Assistant Director of Alumni Relations, noted how great it was to see the HBU fans who stayed to the end. "They cheered every last one of the players as they walked off the field and sang our Alma Mater, Hail the Orange and Blue.

BLESSINGS

by Robert Sloan

O' LORD,

YOU HAVE TOLD US IN YOUR HOLY SCRIPTURES TO REMEMBER AND NOT FORGET ALL THAT YOU HAVE DONE FOR US. YOU HAVE OFTEN TOLD US TO REMEMBER YOUR WAYS AND YOUR TEACHINGS.

LORD, WE TREASURE THE IMPORTANCE OF MEMORY, AND IN THE AMERICAN MUSEUM SOCIETY WE HAVE WORKED HARD TO PRESERVE AND REMEMBER ALL THOSE GOOD THINGS THAT HAVE GONE BEFORE US, THAT ARE WORTH PRESERVING, TREASURING, AND KEEPING.

AND NOW, LORD, MAY YOU BLESS THE WORK OF THE SOCIETY. MAY THEY WITH YOUR GRACE AND SPIRIT BE ENABLED TO LABOR DILIGENTLY AND TO SERVE FAITHFULLY FOR THE GLORY OF CHRIST OUR LORD.

AN ACT OF PROVIDENCE COMMEMORATES FIRST FRESHMAN CLASS & FIRST 50 YEARS

Houston Baptist University welcomed its first class of freshmen fifty years ago this September, three years after the school's founding in 1960. Those wondering what that first day of class was like on the fledgling campus can read all about that and the first fifty years of the school's history in Vice President Emeritus Don Looser's richly detailed work, An Act of Providence. The book won the 2011 Institutional History Award from the Texas Baptist Historical Society and has been reviewed in numerous important periodicals, most recently Houston History magazine. Copies of the book are available in the HBU bookstore and from Amazon.

Meet your Alumni Relations team

BOTH RECENT AND LONG-TIME ALUMNI HAVE BENEFITED FROM NETWORKING WITH OTHER HUSKIES

Amy Youngblood (pictured right) and Christa Hall have joined Alumni Relations as director and assistant director, respectively. Together they make a dynamic team ready to help alumni enjoy the many benefits of staying connected with their HBU family.

Formerly the director of alumni relations at Concordia University Texas, Amy brings a commitment to Christian education and experience helping alumni engage with the University in the area of their greatest joy. As she did at Concordia, Amy hopes to reconnect former students, champion the University's initiatives, and guide volunteer leadership to build a successful and sustainable alumni association at HBU.

Christa, a 2011 HBU alumna, is very excited to return "home" to serve the university she loves. As a student, Christa was heavily involved with residence life and other campus organizations; she currently serves as an advisor for the Iota Pi chapter of Alpha Chi Omega. As an alum herself, Christa desires to respect Husky traditions while adapting to meet the needs of alumni today.

Amy and Christa say the enthusiasm of HBU alumni has been encouraging, especially as the inaugural football season has provided a focal point for activities. Husky alums transported tables and chairs, brought food and put up tents to make the first Husky tailgate a fun-filled event. One crafty alumna even designed and built an orange and blue beanbag-toss game so alums can test their own hand-eye coordination skills before cheering on the Huskies.

Both recent and longtime alumni have benefited from networking with other Huskies during the Husky Social Hour. Due to growing popularity, the event will now be held monthly rather than every other month.

To find out more about how you can connect with HBU and fellow alumni, contact Amy Youngblood at AYoungblood@hbu.edu or Christa Hall at CHall@hbu.edu.

NEW SENIOR DIRECTOR FOR ADVANCEMENT

The University welcomed Chad Cunningham as the new senior director for Advancement in March. He comes to us from John Brown University in Arkansas, where he served as assistant director of annual giving and special projects. Chad and his wife Stephanie's first interaction with HBU was more than ten years ago, but he says their first impression of the university was no small part of their decision to move here.

While conducting a training workshop for HBU's Student Life staff in 2002, the couple shared their struggles with a miscarriage. A few weeks later the Cunningham's received a thank-you package from the staff that included a stuffed toy Husky pup intended for their still hoped-for first child. It was a gesture Chad and Stephanie found deeply moving, and their first-born daughter Brianne still treasures her HBU "Slushy" puppy. Now that they are officially part of the HBU family, the Cunninghams look forward to serving and getting to know many of the wonderful alumni and friends of HBU.

Chad's passion is to enable students to understand God's truth and to become salt and light wherever God leads them. That passion fuels his desire to enable more students to attend HBU through scholarships, and also to assist them in developing relationships with the generous donors who make their higher education possible.

Chad received his BA in church ministry from John Brown University in 1996, and his MA in Christian education from Dallas Theological Seminary in 2000. He has completed several doctoral-level courses in education studies through Talbot School of Theology.

Dr. David Wehr passed away on May 9, 2013. He was director of choral activities and conducting at HBU from 1979 until his retirement in 1998.

passed away on July 18, 2013, at the age of 92. After practicing law for 50 years and retiring from other professorial posts, he served as an adjunct professor in HBU's School of Business from 1998-2006, teaching various economics and graduate-level business law courses. He was known for giving much individual attention to his students, and particularly for helping them hone their research and writing skills. His students' exemplary work was regularly recognized at the University's Celebration of Scholarship Symposium.

Gordon's wife Diana has served as director of HBU's Dunham Bible Museum since 2003, and Gordon was no less an ardent supporter of the museum. When the Bible Museum was being moved to the Morris Cultural Arts Center in 2007, and funds were not available to complete the planned displays, Gordon donated his IRA savings to add audio and interactive features, special murals, display cases, and flooring for the caves. The theater in the museum was named the Gordon and Diana Severance Lyceum in 2012 in recognition of the couple's commitment to the Word of God and its significance to the mission of HBU. At the dedication ceremony, University President Robert Sloan noted that the couple's generosity and creativity "have played a key role in making the museum a meaningful resource not only for the campus, but also for the greater Christian community."

"I already had a law degree when I took Professor Severance's business law class as part of my MBA program, so I didn't expect to learn much. I couldn't have been more wrong! We discussed case analysis well beyond the textbook materials, and I began to apply things I learned from him in my work as an attorney. The lessons I learned from Dr. Severance will last a lifetime. He was more than an instructor; he was a dear friend."
